

From “the worst child seen in 20 years of teaching” to Oxford University Ph.D.

About The Book

When Lois Letchford learns her son has been diagnosed with a low IQ at the end of grade one, she refuses to give up on his future. Testing shows Nicholas is labeled “learning disabled.” The world of education is quick to cast him aside, so Lois begins working with him one-on-one. What happens next is a journey—spanning three continents, unique teaching experiments, never-ending battles with the school system, a mother’s discovery of her own learning blocks, and a bond fueled by the desire to rid Nicholas of the “disabled” label. Reversed is a memoir of profound determination that follows the highs and lows of overcoming impossible odds, turning one woman into a passionate teacher for children who have been left behind.

About The Author

Lois Letchford specializes in teaching children who have struggled to learn to read. Her creative teaching methods vary depending on the reading ability of the student, employing age-appropriate, rather than reading-age-appropriate, material. She holds a Master’s in Literacy and Reading from the State University of New York at Albany and has presented her work at several literacy conferences. Reversed: A Memoir is her first book.

Reviews

“Reversed: A Memoir was written for all of the ‘true’ teachers of the world—every nation, every school, and it will be the true teachers who will exhaust themselves in its reading. I laughed, I cried (often), and I recommitted myself more than ever before to fight for the needs of every child.”
-Steven L. Layne, author of Igniting a Passion for Reading

“Reversed: A Memoir is written as a compelling and emotional tale. A must read.”
-Stephen Hurley, Founder and Chief Catalyst, voicEd Radio

“Read this book and you’ll be challenged by questions about traditional teaching methods, measures of success and failure and what shapes how we view ourselves.”
-Michelle Radke, Lawyer, Brisbane
